

ABSTRACT

An elevator delivery system is used with a truck body or trailer to facilitate loading and unloading cargo. The elevator delivery system includes a platform and drive mechanism for raising and/or lowering the platform. The platform is movable between an upright position between the walls of the truck body and an extended position extending from the truck body. A control system and various types of switches allow the operator to control the raising and lowering of the platform.